Peace work, 1998-2002 and 2006

I had a long and impressive career as a practitioner before I moved across to academia. In Cambridge I worked for a grant-giving organization that helped faith communities at a time of concern about Islamic extremism. In Northern Ireland I coordinated the Intermediary Funding Bodies on the European Union Peace and Reconciliation Programme worth 740 million euro. The programme was an ambitious and innovative attempt to embed peace in Northern Ireland and the border counties of Ireland and to move the society from conflict to peace. I was involved during the early years of the programme and so was involved in work around defining the terms of the programme. I also worked on outreach activities, for example, organizing the conference for the visit of Hillary Rodham Clinton, First Lady of the USA. My work was instrumental in securing a 2-million-pound endowment fund from the UK government and private funders. I was also heavily involved in assessment and evaluation activities for the programme and produced a number of reports on the measure.
