Course focus and approach: This course provides a broad introduction to the historical process of European Integration, to the evolution of the European Union (EU) as an international actor, and to the most relevant current internal and external challenges faced by the EU. It also introduces students to important analytical tools, concepts and theoretical approaches to the subject. The students will identify and analyze current EU debates on security, economic, political and institutional matters, and will explore the role of the EU in the emerging international order. Specifically, students will study and evaluate: the role of the EU as a global economic actor, the role of the EU in addressing key global challenges (such as climate change, development and inequality issues, migration, and transnational crime), EU relations with other strategic actors (such as the United States, Russia and China), and EU relations with important regions of the world (Asia Pacific, Africa, and Latin America and the Caribbean).

Course description: This course is intended to develop and deepen the historical, theoretical and conceptual knowledge on the origins, external relations, and political process of the EU. Some of the key concepts explored in this unit include Europeanization, Transatlantic relations, supranationalism, intergovernmentalism, sovereignty, integration, economic interdependence, globalization, international security, geopolitics, global governance and cooperation. The students attending this course will have to consult multiple sources on current affairs and international relations in general. Also, it is expected that the students have a basic knowledge of how to conduct successful internet sources, and how to use word processing computer programs.

Learning objectives: At the end of the course, the students should have the ability to:
- Define some of the main analytical concepts of international relations in the European Union context.
- Comprehend primary documents and understand their international political implications.
- Combine and synthesize different information sources on Europe’s international relations.
- Present and defend, in an informed way, their positions and analyses on current international affairs, specifically those related to the role of the EU in the world. They will also be able to describe and explain the development of the main tendencies of Europe’s international relations, from the beginning of the Second Cold War to the present.
- Understand the process or European political integration in the context of the division of Europe in two blocks during the Cold War, and in the first decades of the 21st Century.
- Analyze problems and developments of the current political scenario in Europe in a more globalized and interconnected world.

Course workload: The course will entail attendance to a series of lectures and seminars, as well as some in-class activities related to readings and assignments proposed by the lecturer.

Teaching methodology: The course will combine traditional lectures, several in-class activities (primary sources analysis, discussions, debates, etc.). At the end of the course, the students will have to make an oral presentation on a specific topic and present a short essay in the format of a policy paper.

Assessment criteria:

- Active participation is expected and will be encouraged during class (up to 10% of the final grade).
- During the first six weeks of the course, students will have to submit one short essay (between 800-1000 words) on the current relations between the EU and the United States (specific instructions will be announced at the beginning of the course) (15% of the final grade).
- There will be a mid-term exam (topics 1-5) and a final exam (topics 6-8) (dates to be announced) (each exam 25% of the final grade).
- Finally, students will have to prepare a policy paper (a document of policy recommendations for a specific course of action) on the contemporary international relations of the European Union (25% of the final grade). This policy paper (between 2500-3000 words, excluding bibliography), will be prepared in small groups (3-4 students). There will be an oral presentation of this policy paper in a specific session during the final weeks of the course. The main objectives of this exercise are: a) that the students understand some of the contemporary international relations of the EU, using the historical and theoretical knowledge reviewed during the course; and b) that students develop their skills to analyze and present information in different formats. For this paper there will be four issue areas to choose from: EU-China relations, EU-Latin American relations, EU-Mediterranean relations, and EU-Russian relations. Further details will be given during the first weeks of the course.

Overview of activities to be assessed during the course:

1. Participation and attendance: 10%
2. Short individual essay: 15%
3. Mid-term exam (topics 1 to 5): 25%
4. Final exam (topics 6 to 8): 25%
5. Group exercise (policy paper): 25%
To pass this course the students need a final grade of at least 5.0/10.

All the assignments will have to be submitted on the date established by the lecturer. If this is not the case, there will be a penalty on the grade of these exercises of 10% of the grade per day of delay. The cases of plagiarism or other irregular acts (copy, for example) will be penalized with a zero grade (0).

Absence policy

After the add/drop, all registrations are considered final and EAP Absence Policy begins to apply. For the academic year 2019-2020, such policy is as follows:

Attending class is mandatory and will be monitored daily by professors. Missing classes will impact on the student’s final grade as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Absences</th>
<th>Penalization</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Up to two (2) absences</td>
<td>No penalization</td>
</tr>

Emergency situations (hospitalization, family emergency...) will be analyzed on a case by case basis by the Academic Director of the program.
Classroom norms:
- No food or drink is permitted in class
- Students will have a ten-minute break after the first hour of each session
